

Law

About the Subject

Law is about the Legal System in England and Wales. Studying Law at A level will allow you to develop problem solving skills through the application of legal rules. It also develops analytical ability and critical thinking skills.

If you decide to study A Level Law, you will join a popular, outstanding Learning Area which believes that your high personal achievement should be our complete focus. You will have the opportunity to visit the Magistrates Court and Crown Court and be encouraged to undertake work experience in a legal setting during the Year 12 summer enrichment week.

The first module develops knowledge and understanding of the Legal System. The second module introduces substantive law and requires simple application of aspects of both criminal and civil law. The third module develops further knowledge of criminal law along with the defences and possible reforms to the law. The final module is about the law of Tort and investigating concepts of the law.

"I've always wanted to join the Police and saw this course as an ideal opportunity to gain a greater understanding of the Law in our society." Alex (Year 12)
